How To Use This Tool To Identify Children's Interests?

This form provides an easy way to pinpoint interests that are shared by groups of young children. You can use the results as a guide for developing activities that will appeal to the group's interests. In this way, you can help the children in your programme experience creative, interest-based learning activities that they will find truly engaging, beneficial, and fun!

Follow These 3 Easy Steps:

- 1 Look, listen, and observe your learners. Focus on what the children are doing and saying. Try to look beyond the obvious to discover what materials or activities capture the children's imagination.
- 2 Read through the sample interest activities printed in the boxes on the following two pages. In the Notes section on page 3, write additional interests you've observed among the children in your class. Then, while thinking of one child in your class at a time, write his or her first name in three boxes under the three activities you believe hold the greatest interest for him or her. Repeat this process for each class member, writing their first names in the boxes with their three top interests or assets.
- 3 After indicating all of your class members' greatest interests, consider the chart as a whole – which activities have the most children's names under them? Write these in the "Top Class Interests" space on the last page.
